Hannon Westwood's Evaluation Report

With 8 producing fields in the package plus near term developments, additional potential value lies in a further 13 discoveries and at least 22 scouted prospects. A view on this upside can help determine the size and shape of the future value and the bidding strategy.

While cost of capital and strategic value will play an important role, key considerations will also be the value attributed to E&A upside potential, the IRR of the purchase price to value, payback period, cash flow, and pace and phasing of E&A expenditure.

We have produced a special report for £5,000 to offer you insight into the portfolio to complement the work you will do within the next few weeks in the data room and with the information memorandum.

The contents and features will be as follows:

- An indicative NPV per boe and dpi on each property: fields, discoveries, prospects
- Risked production profiles and cash flows
- Oil price/NPV sensitivities on current production and the E&A component of these cash flows
- A listing of key parameters for all acreage and producing assets

If you would like interactive access to the data and the software used to produce the report, we offer a workshop at £5,000. The workshop will include access to our full working resource database, intelligence reports library, GIS system and GTools facilities to examine the portfolio against changes to oil/gas price, discount rates, Capex and Opex, size of reserves, E&A risk, well costs and deferral or phasing of E&A wells.

To capture the insights gained from the interactive workshop, a post workshop report will be provided.
